DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This small two story house, although of 20th century construction, is built in the style of a Georgian home. The front and rear facades are of frame construction with wood siding that has a beaded lower edge, while the north and south facades where the chimneys are located are built entirely of brick laid in a Flemish bond pattern. The gambrel roof is made of slate. The second story windows, each with a small pedimented gable above, are all six over nine sash. Those on the second floor are nine over nine sash. The paneled door has a transom light above and a small ballustrade on either side of it but is otherwise plain. Typical of the Georgian style which this house imitates, it is symmetrical in design.
